

The Future of Health Care

By Joel Arvizo, National HOSA President

Have you ever sat and pondered your future? Have you ever wondered where life would take you? You have considered health care and are now working towards your ultimate goals in life. How are you going to get there? What resources are available to you as a future health care professional? Your major resource is the Health Occupations Students of America.

Headlines and concerns are focused around the health care shortage and its effects on American hospitals and clinics. People all around the nation are looking for a solution. What some don't realize is that there are nearly 70,000 solutions to be found all across this nation. These solutions are the members of HOSA! The HOSA organization is working hard to be seen as the pipeline to the health care shortage. HOSA is the solution and this organization is ready for a year dedicated to providing our members with all the necessary skills to enter the health care industry, in its time of need, with the highest of preparation and confidence. HOSA members from all across this nation will be filling the void that the health care industry is so struggling with.

This year will hold promise for encouraging our members to enter the health care field. National HOSA Week is a great place to begin by planning projects and activities that encourage community involvement with our great organization. The purpose of HOSA week is to allow health occupations students to truly become contributing members of their community by playing an active role within the community. Let others know about the great benefits of this organization by showing them. Allow citizens, business people, health care professionals, peers, family members, and everyone know that the members of HOSA are here to make a difference in the future of health care. HOSA week is a time to allow all to become active in the mission of HOSA.

This year also holds promise as the partnership with the American Cancer Society begins to flourish. First hand knowledge and experience are what potential employers are looking for. What better way to get your one on one experience than with the American Cancer Society. You will have endless opportunities to work with cancer patients and learn about their struggles and their worries. You also have the opportunity to serve an organization that is on the cutting edge of technological research for the fight against cancer. These life experiences will give you the upper hand in your career seeking and boost your overall success.

As you can see, HOSA has an exciting year planned and the National Executive Council is ready and willing to serve the HOSA Organization and all of its members. We are dedicated to increasing the awareness of HOSA within our communities, we are motivated in building a strong foundation with the American Cancer Society, and we are determined to share our passion for HOSA with everyone we come in contact with. As the National Executive Council works hard this year we keep in mind our team quote.

"He who would really benefit mankind, must reach them through their work."

—Henry Ford

We encourage you, HOSA members nationwide, to reach others through your work. Become involved and participate in all that HOSA has to offer. By doing so, you will have the best preparation for anything that may come along your way. If you are passionate about your work, others can do nothing but follow in your footsteps; if you continually work hard towards your goals and aspirations in life, then others can do nothing but follow in your footsteps; and if you connect with and reach out to the people within your community, others can do nothing but follow in your footsteps.

The National Executive Council looks forward to a grand and inspiring year. We encourage you to become involved in all that HOSA has to offer. We wish you the best of luck this year and look forward to seeing you in Atlanta, Georgia for the 26th Annual National Leadership Conference of HOSA.
